

Contents

PART ONE: INTRODUCTION	7	A world of independents in the Dutch theatre system	122
Foreword	8	by Hans van Maanen
by Hans Onno van den Berg and Cas Smithuijsen		Rapid changes and slow strategies	139
Diminishing dualism		Recent market and cultural policy trends in the performing arts sector in Portugal
The performing arts in Europe (1992-2007) between artistic excellence and cultural entrepreneurship	11	by Rui Telmo Gomes
by Cas Smithuijsen and Joris Vermeulen		A need for rejuvenation	153
PART TWO: NATIONAL REPORTS	27	Public funding and the performing arts in Romania
Lacking artistic infrastructure, marketing, travelling budget and social security	28	by Corina Şuteu
Performing arts in Austria		A survival concept of culture	162
by Barbara Stüwe-Eßl		Theatre as a temporary institution in Slovenia
Swim together or sink alone?	40	by Vesna Čopič
The performing arts in transition in Flanders (Belgium)		An unprecedented explosion of cultural activities	171
by Annick Schramme and Katia Segers		The involvement of the public sector in Spain and the transformation of the performing arts
Fruitful interactions	55	by Lluís Bonet and Ana Villarroya
Public and private support for the Bulgarian performing arts		Promising programmes and squeezing budgets	185
by Lyudmila Petrova		The impact of government policies on performing arts in the United Kingdom
An Arena for exchange and innovation	63	by Rod Fisher
Self-Organisation and funding contemporary dance in Estonia		PART THREE: PERSPECTIVES	199
by Margaret Tali		“Not one single truth”	200
Statutory stability and ‘outlaws’	70	Summary of the PEARLE*-conference State on Stage, 7 June 2007
The Finnish funding model for theatres		by Ineke van Hamersveld
by Riitta Seppälä		What can be done?	217
Urban and regional cooperation for cultural democratisation	79	Challenges for the performing arts in Europe
Public policies for the performing arts in France		by Hans Onno van den Berg
by Emmanuel Négrier		About the authors	224
An innovative and dynamic landscape	90	Notes	226
Public support and international theatre exchange in North Rhine-Westphalia (Germany)		Bibliography and interviews	233
by Christian Esch
Mixed blessings	99
Performing arts and governmental policies in Greece
by Costis Dallas, Sofia Karagianni and Georgia Papadopoulou Shifts and breaks in Hungarian theatre (1990-2007)	111
by János Zoltán Szabó			